Ohio’s State Forests

Acquisition of the first state forests began in 1916, originally to be used as testing grounds for reforestation tree species. Land acquisition later broadened to include land of scenic and recreational values and to restore forest cover to land that had been abandoned and abused. Today, Ohio’s 20 state forests cover more than 185,000 acres and provide an abundance of benefits for everyone to enjoy.

With the advantage of 80 years of management, Ohio’s foresters are enhancing nature’s growth cycle and continuing to produce some of the finest hardwood trees in the world on state forest lands. But foresters’ concerns go well beyond the trees. Evaluations of water, soil, wildlife habitat, age and condition of the vegetation, recreational opportunities, and aesthetics are considered in preparation of area management plans. This process insures that visitors may enjoy many outdoor activities including camping, hiking, horseback riding, wildlife watching, hunting, and scenic touring.

Welcome to Tar Hollow

Tar Hollow State Forest originated from the Ross-Hocking Land Utilization project of the 1930s. The purpose of the program was to locate families to more productive land, thereby enabling them to better sustain a living. Following termination of the project, the land was leased to the Division of Forestry, and finally transferred to the State in 1958. Tar Hollow is Ohio’s third largest state forest, containing 16,120 acres.

Recreation

A wealth of recreational activities is available at Tar Hollow State Forest. A 46-site primitive horse camp is located at the south end of the forest on Poe Run Road. Latrines are provided at the camp, but electricity and drinking water are not available. Radiating from the horse camp are 33 miles of bridle trails. All bridle trails are south of the fire tower.

A 22-mile network of hiking trails is located in the northern half of the forest. Seventeen miles of paved forest roads and 14 miles of gravel forest roads provide a great opportunity for a scenic drive and allow good access to all areas of the forest.

Tar Hollow is known state-wide for its excellent hunting opportunities. Hunting success for white-tailed deer and wild turkey has been very good in recent years. Hunting opportunities for squirrel, rabbit, and ruffed grouse also exist.

The Division has set aside 1,700 acres in Coey Hollow as a special grouse management area located in the extreme northwest section of the forest. The Division is working with the Division of Wildlife and the National Ruffed Grouse Society to design management practices that improve grouse habitat.

No discussion of hunting would be complete without mentioning the morel mushroom. Every spring during April and May, hundreds of hopeful hunters scour the hills of Tar Hollow for the delicious morel. A Mushroom Festival is held each year in April. Information can be obtained by writing to the forest address.

Spend a day or a week at Tar Hollow, and explore the many opportunities available at your state forest.
